

Web Security Is No Longer Optional

SSL certificates are only but a single layer of protection providing an entry point security offering within your product portfolio. Yet when conducting third party research with similar online presence vendors, they all stated that the overall importance and demand of website security solutions are expected to increase over the next 3-5 years. Being able to increase customer lifetime value by offering a complete suite of web security solutions has only been possible by piecing together products from multiple vendors. This inherently comes with its own challenges such as technical integration, slow time to market and customer friction caused by an abrasive or even non-existent upsell path – until NOW.
